THE "Win-the-War" mass meeting at the Hawthorne Inn Sunday night was a big success designed to celebrate the anniversary of the entrance of Great Britain into the World war. Representatives from the summer colony all over the shore were in evidence. The decorations comprised British and American flags with those of the other allies. The "Star Spangled Banner" and "Rule Brittania," "America" and "God Save the King," the latter to common music, were lustily sung by the assembly and marked the formal beginning of a rapprochement between the great Anglo-Saxon nations which will always remain indissoluble. Mrs. W. K. Harcourt and Miss Susan Stell recited patriotic selections; Dr. Merrill Hopkinson of Baltimore, professor in the University of Maryland, sang and Rev. Dr. James S. Williamson, of Plymouth church, New Haven, made a short address. Mr. Stacy contributed the use of the Casino and the services of the orchestra.

KNOW how River road got its name? For some years the writer on his annual early summer newsgathering tour made a point to call on the late Boyd Putnam, one of the best known actors in his day, on the American stage. Then the way was called Pleasure point. This particular name was anathema to Mr. Putnam. "Call it any other name than that," quoth he, "What say to River road." And River road it was and has been since. A Prince of good fellows was Boyd Putnam and I pay this tribute to his memory in passing.

NORTH SHORE PUBLISHING CO.

GLOUCESTER - - MASSACHUSETTS

Subscription price, on Cape Ann, for season, 50 cents. Postpaid, outside Cape Ann, $1.00 in advance.

For sale at all the summer hotels, at Shurtleff's news stand, Main Street.

TO ADVERTISERS

THE CAPE ANN SHORE, now in its twenty-second consecutive season, is the only summer resort publication on Cape Ann. It reaches every section of the cape, and is the only means of communication of the kind between the merchants and the summer residents. Therefore its value as an advertising medium is self-evident. It contains each week a full and complete account of the social happenings of the summer resort section. It occupies a place by itself in the advertising field, reaching the most profitable customers along the North Shore. Advertisers should remember these facts.

PRINTED AT THE OFFICE OF THE BARRY PRINTING COMPANY, SALEM, MASS.

NOTICE

Owing to the absence in the Naval Service of the conductor of this paper and inability to attend to the advertising end of the proposition; the urgent demand of the Government for the saving of white paper and the scarcity of labor, the number of pages of this publication is, perforce, reduced. After the Great Peace and normal conditions, the paper will be issued at its usual size.

During the first year of the war the Gloucester correspondent of the Boston Sunday Globe pointed out the advantages of Stage Fort Park as an aviation base.

The location is one of the finest, if the southwestern slope is included in the park, nothing better could be wished for. The heights afford ideal locations for hangars and the gently declining slope an excellent opportunity for a getaway for seaplanes. Gloucester bay, encircled almost wholly by the breakwater, furnishes a fine surface for a descent into the water.

The defensive possibilities of Cape Ann and this particular locality which have been canvassed are excellent. The wooded heights with its emplacements of bowlders and ledges deep down in the soil furnish the strongest natural defenses. In the recent number of the National Geographic Magazine, Cape Ann is termed a Gibraltar of the New England coast. Hence its protection—a vital point—is assured.

Recently Lieut-Com Kirby Smith, a name reminiscent of the struggle of 1861, and Lieut Cahill of the Navy department in company with Mayor Stoddart looked over the park with a view to its possibilities as an aviation base. Their conclusions have been forwarded to Washington.

SOME INTERESTING OLD HOUSES IN GLOUCESTER, MASS.

An effort is being made to preserve one of Gloucester's fine old houses. There were never so many of these houses in Gloucester as in Salem, Newburyport, Portsmouth and many have disappeared. Most of the old houses that remain are in the ownership of descendents of the earliest settlers. The old Riggs house near Annisquam Willows is still inhabited by a descendent of Thomas Riggs, scrivener and the first school teacher in Gloucester, as well as the first shorthand writer in America. The Ellery house near the old Green on Washington Street, was built by Rev. John White, a thrifty parson who owned Thatchers Island and much other property about 1710. It was later occupied by John Stevens as a tavern. About 1740 it was bought by William Ellery who continued in the hotel business for some time. Since then it has been continuously in this family. A grandson of the original William Ellery of Gloucester moved to Newport, R. I. and gave to that state the William Ellery signer of the Declaration of Independence while in direct descent from the Gloucester Ellerys was William Ellery Channing, the famous Boston clergyman.

No one living in Gloucester suffered death in the days of the witchcraft delusion but several were accused and imprisoned for witchcraft and there is plenty of evidence that the people in Gloucester were quite as full of superstitions as they were in Salem, Danvers and Ipswich. The authorities and ecclestiastics were probably less zealous in their work of enforcing the law than in other places. The Spectral Garrison of Cape Ann, a poem by Whittier records one episode illustrating the inhabitants faith in supernatural beings. The story of Peg Wosson is another. She threatened the men starting for the capture of Louisburg and appeared to them there as a raven. Shots fired at the raven had no effect. Then a soldier recalled that base metal had no power to hurt witches, so he loaded his gun with his silver sleeve buttons and this brought the raven down. At that very hour in Gloucester Peg Wosson fell and broke her leg and when the doctors examined the fracture, out dropped the silver buttons. The old witch house in Rockport is said to have been the refuge of one accused of witchcraft in Salem and who fled to what was then an obscure corner of the Cape for safety.

One of the finest old houses in Gloucester is the Babson House at 245 Washington St. It was built by Joseph Allen in 1740, who sold it to Isaac Smith in 1765. In 1779, it was bought by John Low, Jr., who paid for it 8750 pounds or over forty thousand dollars. Undoubtedly this was in continental currency, as it could not have been worth more than two or three thousand dollars at that time. John Low had two daughters one of whom died without issue. The other married Nathaniel Babson about 1790 and the house has been in the possession of the Babsons ever since. In one part of the attic may be seen the slaves quarters, while in the garden some years ago was unearthed two skeletons, which were believed to be skeletons of slaves who had been burned there. Roger Babson of Wellesley Hills, is the fourth in descent from the first Babson to own this place.

Another fine old house is now the home of the Sawyer Free Library. The exterior of this building has been badly injured by those who attempted to improve it but the hall and stairway is an architectural gem. Another old house on Middle Street, has been variously known as the Judith Sargent House, the old Revolutionary House and the John Murray House. It is referred to as follows, by Porter E. Sargent in his Handbook of New England. "Built before the Revolution, its exterior and interior remain unchanged. It was built by Winthrop Sargent for his daughter Judith, later wife of Rev. John Murray, "Father of American Universalism." This is one of the finest colonial interiors in Massachusetts. The wood carvings were brought from England."

This is not quite correct so far as the exterior is concerned. Several excrescences have been added since the house was built, somewhere about 1768. The interior, however, has been little changed and considering its long occupancy of nearly one hundred and fifty years is marvelously well preserved.

Winthrop Sargent, the builder of the house, was Gloucester's leading merchant at that time. Winthrop and Epes Sargent were prominent members of the Independent Church, the parent church of Universalism. Winthrop Sargent went to Boston and invited Murray to Gloucester. The Sunday services of Murray for some years were held in the large parlors of this mansion. When the first church was built, the first Universalist church in America, it was built in a corner of Mr. Sargent's garden, a little east of Post Office Square. Of the 30 shares subscribed for the building of this church, Winthrop Sargent took thirteen. When Murray was mobbed and invited to leave town, Mr. Sargent gave him the support of his powerful protection. When the Universalists refused to pay taxes to the established order, the goods of Winthrop and Epes Sargent were seized and sold by the authorities. In the long legal contest which followed was one of the celebrated legal battles of America in which such eminent lawyers as Rufus King, Judge James Sullivan and Theophilus Parsons were engaged, the Sargents were the financial backers of Murray and his followers, in their fight to establish the right of each person to give his financial support to the faith of his choice. Epes Sargent wrote a very able pamphlet entitled, An appeal to the Impartial Public, by the Society of Christian Independents, Congregating in Gloucester. This pamphlet no doubt had much influence on public opinion and the decision of the judges which finally established freedom of worship and the voluntary support of all churches in the United States.
